PRELIMINARY

Human beings use language daily to communicate and convey what they intend to say, which is why it is so significant. Human beings can express their emotion, feelings, intention, and desires using language as an intermediary. It contains words and the combination of words into sentences as the basis. It also expresses tens of thousands of signs as combinations of form and meaning (Eifring & Theil, 2005). According to George Yule (1996), pragmatics is the study of speaker meaning and how people comprehend and produce a communicative act in a concrete. In short, Language is a system of arbitrary sound symbols social group members use to work together, communicate, and identify (Nainggolan dkk., 2021). Or in other definition, Language is a system of arbitrary vocal symbols used for human communication (Research in Teaching of Literature.ris, t.t.).

A novel is part of literary work. According to Nurgiyantoro (2009:10), a novel is described as a masterpiece of prose fiction that is long enough, not too long, but not too short. The teacher, even the lecturer, usually chooses novels to be learning media in the class because novels contain great stories. The author writes the novels through their experience and observation in reality and the story inside the novels related to an actual phenomenon or fictional phenomenon. The novel comes from the Latin word Novellus, derived from the phrase movies, which means "new". It is said to be new because this novel emerged later than other types of literature, such as poetry, drama, and others (Mukhlis, 2020).

Usually, figurative language is frequently used in novels, poems, songs, and other literary works. This kind of stylistic writing can increase and boost people's will as it enriches the expression and makes it more attractive to read (Yilmaz, 2018). Figurative language can make the language more beautiful and attracts people to read it. Besides making the sentence more beautiful, figurative language can also make the language rich in earnings. The writers generally use figurative language to express their hearts to the reader. By using figurative language, the writers intend to make the readers able to feel the emotion by nature, not only by using their eyes only. So, sometimes if the figurative language that the writers use in the novel is very touching and heartwarming, the readers can imagine deeply as if they experienced it by themselves.

Jason Reynold wrote a novel associated with Marvel Comics called Miles Morales: Spider-Man (2017) as cited in (Jason Reynolds, t.t.). It’s the title of this research because nowadays, people, especially students, aren’t aware enough to pay attention and learn figurative language deeper than the passages in the book or novel. Some data from Miles Morales's story are “All this trash that our wonderful garbage-men left behind and The forest of skyscrapers.” It's been exciting to be analyzed.

The author used some previous studies to guide the research. The first previous study is research conducted by (Damayanti, 2018) entitled The Analysis of Figurative Languages Used in the Novel “The Book of Forbidden Feeling” by Lala Bohang. The purpose is to find the types of figurative language used in the novel, to describe the meaning, and to find the dominant styles of the symbolic language used in the Novel. Damayanti analyzed her research by applying the descriptive qualitative method. Damayanti identified, classified, described, and explained the meaning of every figurative language t. From the step-by-step that Damayanti did, five types of figurative language are used in the Novel. Those five symbolic languages are simile, personification, metaphor, apostrophe, and hyperbole. Of the five figurative languages in the novel, metaphor is the most dominant figurative language used. The description of the meaning of each figurative language is based on the guidance of every sentence they belong into the kinds and the contextual meaning of figurative language. Figurative language makes the novel's sentence more prominent, showing more expression and containing intentions. It is also also.

The second previous study is from the research (Wijayanti, 2017) entitled “An Analysis of Figurative Language Used in Paulo Coelho’s Adultery Novel.” The purpose is to identify the types of figurative language used in the novel, describe the types of figurative language used in the story, show the dominant type of figurative language used in the story, and find the non-dominant type of it. Wijayanti uses the descriptive qualitative method. Wijayanti collected the data using the documentation method. On the research findings, four types of figurative language are used in the novel. There is a comparison between symbolic languages, such as simile, personification, metaphor, and allegory. There is an opposition between figurative language, such as hyperbole, antithesis, paradox, and apostrophe. There is a linkage between symbolic languages, such as metonymy, symbol, synecdoche, and euphemism, and there is Repetition in figurative languages, such as antanaclasis, chiasmus, and repeat. From the total of 115 data, there are 56 or 48.6%, data included in comparison figurative language, 32 or 27.8% of data contained in opposition figurative language, 8 or 7% of data included in linkage figurative language, and 19 or 16.5% data included in repetition figurative language. The comparison of figurative language with 56 or 48.7% data from 115 or 100% data of symbolic languages used in the novel is the most dominant type of figurative language used in the Adultery novel. Moreover, personification is Adultery's novel's most dominant figurative language.
The third previous study is the research (Harya, 2017a) on the research entitled “An Analysis of Figurative Language Used In Coelho’s Novel entitled Alchemist.” The purpose is to describe the types of figurative language found in the book and to identify the contextual meaning of the figurative language in the novel—the method utilized in collecting the information or data from the story. The data collection used the following steps: reading the story and then choosing the data that utilized figurative language. Whereas the steps to analyze the data recognize the types of figurative language, distinguishing the relevant and contextual meaning of the figurative language, and the final one is interpreting the data found in the novel. The result of the research exhibits that 70 sentences contain figurative language. From those 70 sentences, there are 30 items or 42.9% of simile, 27 items or 38.6% of personification, 12 items or 17.1% of metaphor, and 1 item or 1.4% of hyperbole. A simile is the dominant figurative language in the research.

The fourth previous study is “An Analysis of Figurative Language In Daniel Bedingfield Song Lyrics: Never Gonna Leave Your Side” (Chintia Handayani, 2022). His research aims to discover the symbolic language typically found in Daniel Bedingfield’s song entitled Never Gonna Leave Your Side. This research used a descriptive qualitative method. This study found 4 Similes, 3 Personifications, 1 Irony, and 2 Hyperboles. The difference with the author's research is the formal object, namely the novel.

The previous study is “An Analysis of Figurative Language in Online Short Story Posted on The Jakarta Post” (Wibisono & Widodo, t.t.). This research aimed to find some kinds of figurative language used in selected short stories online in the Jakarta Post. This research employs library research because the researcher visited the libraries to get the data. The theory of Figurative Language is by Perrine. First, figurative language has many types: metaphor, simile, personification, metonymy, Irony, symbol, hyperbole, paradox, alliteration, allusion, onomatopoeia, and many others. Henceforth, all kinds of figurative language cannot be found in all works of literature. Some types are primarily found in the literature, such as simile, personification, hyperbole, metaphor, Irony, and metonymy. In this case, the writer only conducted the research in a short story. The writer found some types of figurative language in the short story: personification, simile, symbol, and onomatopoeia. Personification is one of the types of figurative language primarily found in the brief report posted on the online Jakarta Post.

The method used in this research is the descriptive qualitative method. The descriptive qualitative method produces data that portray the who, what, and where of events, occasions, or experiences from a subjective perspective (Kim dkk., 2017). In the descriptive qualitative method, techniques like seeking the data, gathering data, elaborating, and analyzing the data are not odd things to be done by the researcher (Patten, 2018). States descriptive qualitative research deployed if the problems are not solved, finding the hidden meanings, grasping social interactions, developing and strengthening theories, and confirming the data's validity.

In data collection there are various techniques to collect data. For example, the researcher can do interviews, observations, and documentation. The researcher chose the documentation technique in conducting this research because it is suitable for gathering the data required. Moreover, the documentation technique is discovering and collecting data related to things or variables used in the transcript, books, notes, magazines, and others. Definitely, in Miles Morales: Spider-Man, the researcher uses novels to be the resource for collecting the data. To obtain the required data, the researcher applies these three steps: (1) The researcher reads the Miles Morales: Spider-Man novel carefully and accurately; (2) The researcher highlights and identifies the sentences that contain figurative language and note them; (3) The researcher investigates the contextual meaning of those figurative languages.

In data analysis, the researcher analyzed the data through the following steps: (1) Identify. The first step is needed to identify the sentences which contain figurative language; (2) Classify the second step used to classify what type of figurative language which already found in the sentences; (3) Interpret. The third step is to find out the meaning of figurative language already found in the sentences; (4) Analyze. The research analyzes the data to discover the types of figurative language in the book, the meaning of every figurative language in the novel, the most prominent figurative language in the story, and its contribution to education; (5) Conclude. Considering that those four steps above are already finished, the last step of data analysis is the researcher making the conclusion based on the already analyzed data.

DISCUSSION

Figurative Language;

Figurative language is defined as a language that uses words or expressions with meanings different from the literal and actual interpretation. Figurative Language is a way of using language in essays or how an author reveals something that will be put forward (Putra & Puspitasari, 2020). Figurative language is the method taken to express feelings or ideas by comparing two things, other similes of objects with nothing in common, or treating inanimate objects like living things (Swarniti, 2022). Figurative language is a figure of speech that cannot be entirely deduced from the words that make it up. Figurative language can frequently be found in literary works, such as novels, poems, songs, etc. So in real life, like a daily conversation, figurative language is rarely found there. According to Abrams (Damayanti, 2018) states, figurative language is divided into two classes, the first one is a figure of thought, and the second one is a figure of speech. A figure of thought contains words with an extension based on their standard meaning. On the other hand, the figure of speech includes words that have a rhetorical effect. The figure of speech has another name called a figure of expression. People may find numerous figurative language in just one book, and there are four main reasons for using metaphorical language (Perrine & Arp 1993). Firstly, figurative language provides the readers with imaginative happiness in literary works. Readers usually become happier than before. They enjoy literary works containing figurative language. Secondly, the symbolic language carrying additional imagery into verse builds the abstract concrete and makes literary works more sensuous. Thirdly, it creates an intensity more emotional to otherwise merely informative statements and delivers attitudes along with information. Eventually, it is a way to convey a lot more in a brief compass. Figurative language is personification, metaphor, hyperbole, simile, oxymoron, allusion, litotes, and metonymy (Putu Ratna, 2017). According to (Nainggolan dkk. 2021) states, figurative language is classified into seven types. Those seven types of figurative language are metaphor, personification, hyperbole, simile, irony, metonymy, and Repetition.

The Data of Figurative Languages Conveyed in the Miles Morales;

The researcher has found 102 figurative languages in the novel. From 102 symbolic languages, several types of figurative language are depicted using the following pie chart below to demonstrate the percentage of figurative language in the story.

Chart 1. The Data of Figurative Languages Conveyed in the Miles Morales

There are some figurative language found in Miles Morales: Spider-Man novel. Its are divided into several types; metaphor, personification, hyperbole, simile, irony, metonymy, and repetition. The first figurative language is a metaphor. So far, the use of metaphors in research assumes that we directly seek certain metaphors in the material and consciously form the metaphors to present results or describe the process (Schmitt, 2015). The first metaphor are “you wet the bed”, with meaning Miles urinates on his bed many times. The second is to “ignore his beehive brain whenever the bees up there get to buzzing”, meaning: Miles is thinking about another thing, not focusing. The third is “Being Superhero had an expiration date” with meaning: Miles can’t be a superhero forever. The fourth and the fifth are “His faces volleying back and forth, and There was steel in his voice”. Metaphor-based usage metaphorical expressions that can reveal implied meaning. With metaphor, depth means it can be conveyed, although things that cannot be expressed the use of formal unit language or standard language (Rahmadhanti, 2022).

The second one is personification. Personification consists in giving human characteristics to an object (Harya, 2017b). They are “Your pissy butt would come waddling into our bedroom in the middle of the night smelling like two hundred year old lemonade talkin’ about, I had an accident, Trash cans and stuffed bags lined in the block, The sun started to rise, a line of gold streaking across the red brick”, Sunlight brightens the red brick, “The silence sizzling in Miles's stomach as if the chicken he had eaten were refrying itself, Aaron's clothes were in trash bags lined up along the wall.” Personification is a unique feature of metaphor, which makes the analogy of inanimate objects acting, and speak, like humans (Padillah dkk., 2016).

The third figurative language of Miles Morales: Spider-Man novel is hyperbole. Hyperbole is one of the most used figures of speech or traditionally called "figuratively," in literature and everyday language (Altikriti, 2016). In this research, there are some examples of hyperbole. They are “If you get suspended, it’s gonna be you I’m fanning out the window.”, “I’m surprised your folks didn’t kill you,” he Dragged outside on the stoop by his father, “All this trash that our wonderful garbage-men left behind. The forest of skyscrapers. If Miles's parents had known he used to spend time with Aaron, he'd be on punishment for the rest of his life.” Hyperbole is figurative language in which the pronunciation is exaggerated to emphasize certain statements or situations so that the impression and impact are more significant and more valuable (Bian, 2021).
The following figurative language of Miles Morales: Spider-Man novel is Irony. The irony is used to depict meanings that are different from the literal meaning of a thing saying; many times, this can be the opposite or hyper-stem (Sykora et al., 2020). There are five ironies of figurative language found in it. They are “Bolting down the hallway and out the door, a gust of wind, only to find...nothing,” “I love the kid, but we can’t afford another mouth,” “So this was about you saving somebody huh? who’s gonna save you?”, “Uncle Aaron’s apartment-4D-had nothing in it but a mattress, a few fold-up chairs, a rickety TV stand with a TV on top, and a small coffee table.” “The whole thing had been a bad idea, but this was the only part of the bad idea that sounded like a good idea.” The fourth and the fifth are simile and metonymy. Similes are general comparisons of two fundamentally different things, based on something resembling one aspect. Similes use connecting words like “like” and “as” to compare the similarities (Nursolihat & Kareviati, 2020). Examples are “Your pissy butt would come waddling into our bedroom in the middle of the night smelling like two hundred year old lemonade,” and “Miles's father said like a disobedient child.” “The silence is sizzling in Miles's stomach as if the chicken he had eaten were refrying itself.” “He said it was uncomfortable, and took a second to get used to, like being trapped in some cocoon.” “He smeared the spider on the wood like chewing gum on the sidewalk.” And the last is Metonymy, The use of metonymy is essential because it can encapsulate all the feelings and "nuances" that the author wants to convey in just a few words (Chaerunnisah, 2020). Example of metonymy is “He never talked about how he'd stalk around Wall Street," “You don’t know my abuela?". "Air Max 90s. Infrareds. OGs". And the last figurative language is Repetitio, for the example is "And on and on with the neighborhood "heroics." chore after chore. Job after job. Ramen pack after ramen pack.” For the meaning: It emphasis what Miles did to his neighbor after helping them.

Metaphor has the most appearance in Miles Morales: Spider-Man novel with 33%, followed by 23% of Hyperbole, 21% of Simile, 11% of Personification, 8% of Irony, 3% of Metonymy, and only 1% of Repetition. It is implied that the songwriter created the song using similes rather than ordinary language to describe the ideas and feelings in the song's lyrics. Each song lyric has a different meaning, which can sometimes be understood after reading or listening to the music, but in some cases requires repeated listening or reading to understand it truly.
